

Dear Bug Hater,

Sometimes, good neighbors are hard to find. For example: you look out the window. Across the crowded Brooklyn street, down near the curb, you see hordes of ugly bugs massing in the sewer. And there's a hungry, "let's-eat-a-building" gleam in their beady little eyes.

Poor Potsy, you think. His home is a goner for sure. And you shut your window.

But wait. Wait. Not you. You wouldn't abandon a neighbor in distress. In fact, you'd help Potsy pick off the encroaching roaches, wouldn't you? You'd clobber so many wallcrawlers that you'd score more than 75,000 points in Crackpots...and maybe get named Brooklyn Exterminator of the Year.

Aha. That's exactly what happened, isn't it?

So we'd like to welcome another good neighborly soul to the Activision Crackpots Club.

(You know...because of you, there are a lot of bothered bugs over in the Bronx right now.)

Yours truly,
