

Dear Novary Wing Commander:

Let me begin this letter with a quote from Winston Churchill, a humanoid from an obscure, distant planet in the third quadrant of the Milky Way galaxy:

"Never has so much been owed by so many to so few."

He was talking about his Royal Air Force which, although vastly outnumbered, had turned back the flying hordes of an arrogant enemy and preserved its homeland. Multiply this heroic feat by a thousandfold, and the result would resemble something like what you've done, Commander. Because an entire planet owes you its life.

In recognition of your tenacity in defense of Terra, we hereby proudly proclaim you an official Dreadnaught Destroyer.

Congratulations, commander.

Yours truly,
